The Company You Keep

Synopsis

Jim Grant (Robert Redford) is a public interest lawyer and single father raising his daughter in the tranquil suburbs of Albany, New York. Grant's world is turned upside down, when a brash young reporter named Ben Shepard (Shia LaBeouf) exposes his true identity as a former 1970s antiwar radical fugitive wanted for murder. After living for more than 30 years underground, Grant must now go on the run. With the FBI in hot pursuit, he sets off on a cross-country journey to track down the one person that can clear his name.

Shepard knows the significance of the national news story he has exposed and, for a journalist, this is an opportunity of a lifetime. Hell-bent on making a name for himself, he is willing to stop at nothing to capitalize on it. He digs deep into Grant's past. Despite warnings from his editor and threats from the FBI, Shepard relentlessly tracks Grant across the country.

As Grant reopens old wounds and reconnects with former members of his antiwar group, the Weather Underground, Shepard realizes something about this man is just not adding up. With the FBI closing in, Shepard uncovers the shocking secrets Grant has been keeping for the past three decades. As Grant and Shepard come face to face in the wilderness of the Upper Peninsula of Michigan, they each must come to terms with who they really are.

One of Hollywood's most acclaimed filmmakers and actors, Oscar[®]-winning director Robert Redford (Ordinary People; Quiz Show; The Sting) directs and heads an all-star ensemble that includes Shia LaBeouf (Transformers: Dark of the Moon) as determined reporter Ben Shepard, and Academy Award[®]-winner Julie Christie (Red Riding Hood) as Mimi Lurie, the woman inescapably linked to Grant's past and his future. The cast also includes various figures tied to Grant's previous life as an antiwar radical: Sam Elliot (Up In The Air) as Mimi Lurie's current partner, Mac McLeod; Oscar[®]-nominee Richard Jenkins (The Visitor) as respected history professor Jed Lewis; Oscar[®]-nominee, Nick Nolte (Warrior) as the ever-loyal Donal; and Oscar[®]-winner Susan Sarandon (Thelma & Louise; Dead Man Walking) as housewife-cum-fugitive, Sharon Solarz, whose dramatic arrest sets the story in motion.

Additional cast members include: Oscar[®] winner, Chris Cooper (Adaptation) as Grant's brother, Daniel Sloan; Jackie Evancho (America's Got Talent) as Grant's daughter, Isabel; Golden Globe nominee Brendan Gleeson (The Guard; In Bruges) as Henry Osborne, a retired police chief harboring secrets of his own; Brit Marling (Another Earth; Sound of My Voice) as Osborne's daughter, Rebecca; Oscar[®] nominee Anna Kendrick (50/50; Up in the Air) as Diana, a junior FBI agent; Oscar[®] nominee Stanley Tucci (The Hunger Games) as Shepard's editor, Ray Fuller; and Oscar[®] nominee Terrence Howard (Hustle & Flow) as Cornelius, a senior FBI agent determined to bring Grant to justice.

THE COMPANY YOU KEEP is based on the novel by Neil Gordon and adapted for the screen by Lem Dobbs (Haywire). The film is directed by Robert Redford. It is produced by Academy Award[®] winner Nicolas Chartier (The Hurt Locker), Robert Redford and Bill Holderman (The Conspirator; Lions for Lambs). The executive producers are Craig J. The Company You Keep

About The Production

"Secrets are dangerous things, Ben. We all think we want to know them. But if you've ever kept one yourself then you understand to do so is not just knowing something about someone else, it's discovering something about yourself."

-- Jim Grant

SCRIPT TO SCREEN

THE COMPANY YOU KEEP can be seen as a cat and mouse game between two men – journalist Ben Shepard (Shia LaBeouf) and fugitive Jim Grant (Robert Redford) – both attempting to expose the truth and, in the process, redefine their lives. While the film, which is set in the present day, recalls the history and aftermath of the radical antiwar protest movement of the late 1960s and early 1970s (and in particular one of its most violent manifestations, The Weather Underground), it remains a work of fiction. Indeed it was the dramatic potential of the story itself, even more so than the meticulously researched underpinnings of Neil Gordon's 2003 novel, which first attracted Robert Redford to the project.

"I thought it was a good story and it gave you a chance to look inside of an event that is a piece of American history," says Redford of the film, his first as both actor and director since his 2007 drama, Lions for Lambs. "It truly gets inside how people were living their lives thirty years later... underground and with a false identity."

"For me it was a bit like Les Misérables, with the character Jean Valjean sentenced to nineteen years for a loaf of bread," Redford explains. "He escaped from prison, built a false identity, had a daughter, had a good life, but the pain of that time was always going to haunt him,. So how do these people deal with that? Do they change? Do they not change? That was the interesting story to be told. It wasn't so much about the antiwar movement itself, because that belongs to history.”

Working with fellow producers Bill Holderman, who previously collaborated with Redford on Lions for Lambs and his most recent directorial effort, The Conspirator (2010), and Nicolas Chartier (The Hurt Locker), the project was developed over the course of four years. Adapted by Lem Dobbs, who scripted Haywire and The Limey for Steven Soderbergh, the screenplay centers on Grant's journey as he reconnects with the ghosts of his past – many still living underground – with the hope of ultimately exonerating himself from the murder charges he fled as a student linked to the radical fringe of the antiwar movement. All the while, Ben Shepard and the FBI pursue him, never more than a few steps behind his trail.

“This is about a group of people that were underground,” Redford explains. “They were very close, bonded by the styles of their time, the passions of their time, and now they've grown older and they've taken different paths. Some resent that they did it. Others have remorse. Some believed in it at the time, but feel they have to spend the rest of their lives paying for it. Others feel it was a just cause at the time and still is a cause for today. So there's also all these multiple feelings and relationships – how they all interacted fascinated me.”

While Redford planned both the scenario and the production itself down to the finest detail, he also left considerable elements of the story open to the actors' own interpretations. Indeed, as an actor himself, he encouraged each individual's input.

“It was a skeletal script at the beginning that he was fleshing out through rehearsal,” explains Shia LaBeouf (Transformers; Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps) of the collaboration between the director and his cast.

“I think it was like 80 pages when I first received it – and then he just started pumping life into it,” says LaBeouf. “He allowed twenty pages for the script to evolve.

He was still comfortable enough to pull the green-light-trigger on it... And he had the confidence in himself and his team to be able to move forward.”

LaBeouf points to a scene shared with Brendan Gleeson (The Guard) by way of example, one in which his journalist prods Gleeson’s retired police chief for information at an Ann Arbor, Michigan diner. “That scene didn’t even really exist initially,” explains LaBeouf. “Then you bring in somebody like Gleeson and you start riffing a bit... Redford allows it to breathe, but it’s structured. It’s not just ad-libbed – it’s very structured as to what needs to be explained and why.”

“He acts as though he’s completely in control, but he allows his film to be as free as something that has no control or boundaries at all, which allows life to exist... which allows real moments to happen and he maintains structure,” says LaBeouf of Redford. “It’s really amazing what he does and he does it so easily, it seems. That’s the beauty of him.”

THE CAST

For his 9th film as director, Robert Redford tapped some of the top talent working in film today. To a considerable extent, the appeal of THE COMPANY YOU KEEP comes from watching its remarkable ensemble of veterans in action, performers including Julie Christie, Susan Sarandon, Stanley Tucci, Terrence Howard, Richard Jenkins, Chris Cooper and Nick Nolte – former Oscar[®] winners or nominees, all.

Redford also turned to some of the brightest young actors working today, including Shia LaBeouf in the leading role of Ben Shepard, and rising stars Brit Marling (Another Earth) and Oscar[®]-nominee Anna Kendrick (Up in the Air), in supporting roles.

“In a selfish way I find working with these young artists inspiring,” says Redford. “They have new ideas and you learn from them. You’re never too old or too successful to not be learning something. It keeps you alive and it keeps you questioning.”

For the central role of Jim Grant, however, Redford decided to play the part himself. “Because I’m nuts,” laughs the legendary star. “To step in and out of both roles is not easy for me,” he says of performing double duty as actor and director. “I can do it. But it’s definitely not easy.”

ROBERT REDFORD – JIM GRANT

With over 52 years in the business, 30 films as a producer, nine as director and an estimated 66 screen-roles to his credit, Robert Redford is one of the most influential figures in the film industry. He has received two Oscars[®]; the first for his directorial debut, Ordinary People in 1980, the second for Lifetime Achievement in 2002. He is also the founder of The Sundance Institute, and with it, The Sundance Film Festival, known for their passionate commitment and immeasurable contribution to independent cinema. For THE COMPANY YOU KEEP, Redford would call upon his experience and passion to bring the film and central character to life, shepherding his own independent project forward over the course of several years with his producing partners.

Though clearly captivated by the character of Jim Grant – his sense of loyalty, nobility and integrity – Redford is nevertheless quick to point out the differences between himself and the man we see on screen. “At that time, I was raising a family and starting a career, so I wasn’t involved politically,” he says. “The activism in my life was centered around the environment. On the other hand, I had a lot of friends who were involved. I saw what was happening; I could see the good of it. The reason people were so passionate was because there was a draft then... People didn’t want to fight a war they didn’t believe in and so they rebelled against it. I sympathized with that at the time, but I didn’t get involved.”

Although Redford ultimately welcomed the task of directing and simultaneously playing the leading role on screen, he did have his initial reservations – along with his own unique approach.

“I think you have to be schizophrenic in a controlled way,” he explains. “To act and direct is not something that I’m particularly drawn to. When I act, I like to be free to act and when I’m directing I like to be free to look at the situation in the way the conductor of an orchestra would. Instead of being a single instrument, you’re looking at how they all come together and create a story.”

“I was just in awe of him,” says rising star, Brit Marling, who stars as Brendan Gleeson’s daughter, Rebecca Osborne, of working with Redford. “It was an incredible experience just to be a part of it.”

“He’s just a great guy, a wonderful guy,” says Richard Jenkins, who plays one of Grant’s former cohorts, the former radical and now ‘respectable,’ history professor, Jed Lewis. “You can tell that just by this cast. He asks you to do something and you go, ‘Sure...’

“I would say he’s one of the sweetest people I’ve ever met,” says Julie Christie, who plays Redford’s former lover and fellow underground fugitive, Mimi Lurie, on screen. “He has an enormous sweetness which is quite striking. But he also knows what he wants and as a director he’s absolutely single-minded about getting it.”

“I met him as a fan and that stayed throughout the entirety of our whole working relationship,” says Shia LaBeouf of his close collaboration with Redford as director and co-star. “But he also has a way of diminishing that fan bubble and getting right to work. I got my script on the very first day I met him. And it was right to work.”

SHIA LABEOUF – BEN SHEPARD

Shia LaBeouf came to international prominence thanks largely to his roles in Steven Spielberg's Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull and the immensely popular Transformers film series. With THE COMPANY YOU KEEP, the actor saw a once in a lifetime opportunity to work with Robert Redford, along with an incredible role in Ben Shepard.

“When I read the script, I saw Ben as an idealist,” says LaBeouf. “I looked at Redford and Dustin Hoffman in All the President's Men (Alan J. Pakula's 1976 film on the Watergate scandal); there was a bit of both of them there. To me, Ben was an amalgamation of those two men. I pitched that idea to Bob and he was very comfortable with it.”

“Still, Ben's a complex character and, admittedly, a bit of a fame-whore too,” says LaBeouf, with a smile. “In a sense, he's living in a turtle shell. He's all about him. He's all about making that turtle shell bigger – and it's all self-propelled insanity, really. He's all about getting famous for being the best reporter in the world and he's got the story... But at the same time his life doesn't have a lot of love in it. He's in solitude. He's the kind of guy who googles himself every night for self validation. Ben is like that, and then he finds a woman like he's never known and he chases that dream in the midst.”

“In the story I meet Shia's character who's a reporter and I'm guarded; I don't exactly trust him,” says Brit Marling, who plays Rebecca Osborne, of their relationship on screen. “And then we sort of get to know one another and it turns out I may have a right to be guarded.”

“It's a very political movie, but it's also just very fundamentally human,” Marling continues. “I don't think it works to make a movie that's just about politics, because movies are ultimately about moving people. When you talk about politics, but it's buried within a human story, the audience is more willing to open up and let those ideas in along with the emotions.”

Ultimately for LaBeouf, there was also the attraction of playing a role unlike any he’s done before. “I’m playing the antagonist for the first time, which is really fun for me,” says the young star. “It’s sexy as hell to do that. And for the protagonist to be Robert Redford is really wild for me. To be on the same poster as Robert Redford is really wild for me... Throw in that cast that we had, those really amazing actors who brought so much cool stuff to the table and really fleshed out the script – it was just an amazing ride. ”

JULIE CHRISTIE - MIMI LURIE

Since bursting onto the scene in 1965 with her Oscar[®]-winning performance in John Schlesinger’s Darling, Julie Christie has remained a perennial force in motion pictures. With a career spanning over fifty years and over fifty film and television projects, the British actress has starred in such popular and critically acclaimed hits as David Lean’s Doctor Zhivago, Francois Truffaut’s Fahrenheit 451, Schlesinger’s Far from the Madding Crowd, Robert Altman’s McCabe & Mrs. Miller, Nicolas Roeg’s Don’t Look Now, Hal Ashby’s Shampoo, along with more recent films like Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban (for director Alfonso Cuarón) and Catherine Hardwicke’s 2011 film, Red Riding Hood, with Amanda Seyfried.

Still, it was Christie’s performance as a woman suffering from Alzheimer’s in Away From Her which caught the attention of Robert Redford (the film was featured at Sundance), the industry and audiences alike. It also marked Christie’s fourth Oscar[®] nomination in 2008, along with Golden Globe, SAG and National Board of Review awards for her performance.

“I had always admired Robert Redford for his work, his environmental activities and of course, his amazing achievement with Sundance,” says Christie, who welcomed the overdue opportunity to work with Redford on screen. Indeed, while the two veteran performers had started their careers at roughly the same time, neither had worked together until Redford cast the British actress in THE COMPANY YOU KEEP.

Here, Christie stars as committed radical Mimi Lurie. Like Redford’s Jim Grant, Lurie is also a former member of the Weather Underground, living under various false identities since becoming a fugitive as a young woman. Unlike Grant, however, she remains unrepentant about her past, while holding the key to her former lover’s future.

“In the film, she’s perceived as a terrorist because of her activities in the 70s,” says Christie of the character. “They were targeting these particular institutions, to cast light on what was going on in Vietnam, because the nonviolent action they were involved in seemed to be going nowhere.”

“From her own perspective she’s gone underground and remained underground because she believes that to hand herself over would be collaborating with those very forces she’s been fighting; an acceptance of their mores, which she deplors,” Christie explains. “She would be perceived by a lot of people as having tunnel vision, when in fact she has enormous vision. The problem with ‘enormous vision’ though is that you can see all sides of the equation and you have to choose out of all those sides... You choose what you think is the most effective way of operating, whereas most people follow what they are told to follow. That’s the real tunnel vision.”

Known for her own, at times controversial, political views, Christie could empathize with the character while simultaneously noting the need of making a “stretch” to portray her. “In the end what she has is enormous integrity,” says the acclaimed actress. “I would say, ‘painful’ integrity, because integrity is a painful business.”

PRODUCTION

Filmed in and around Vancouver, BC, principal photography for THE COMPANY YOU KEEP began on September 19, 2011 and continued through late November of that year. Redford worked with many of his key production collaborators for the first time, including the award-winning director of photography, Brazilian Adriano Goldman (Sin Nombre), and production designer Laurence Bennett (best known for his work with Paul Haggis and, most recently, Michel Hazanavicius on The Artist).

“I’d never worked with these guys before, but this is a terrific crew,” says a beaming Redford of his team. “Film is a collaborative medium despite the auteur theory and all that. Each role is really important. It’s important to show respect for these roles and let them know how important they are and how important they are to us to get a project completed.”

“I work pretty hard to show a crew that respect and yet you still have to be pretty demanding of them,” says Redford of his approach on set. “I’ve always been fortunate to have good ones and this is certainly the best I’ve ever worked with.”

So too did the director arrive in Vancouver well prepared. “We had all of the conversations that we had to have before we got there,” LaBeouf explains. “Redford knew that he wouldn’t have the time to have conversations about character motivation, etc., in the middle of the fight – you know, when he’s on set it’s got to be about that.”

While many members of the all-star ensemble would come in and out of Vancouver to shoot their scenes, owing to their own additional filming commitments, LaBeouf would remain with Redford for the whole of the shoot. “I was sort of the set mascot,” jokes the actor.

“What happened was I read with most of the other actors on my own time with Bob’s ‘homework list,’” says LaBeouf of his prep work. “For me, there was a lot of rehearsal. There was a lot of rehearsal for Bob too, but there wasn’t a lot for Julie Christie or most of the other actors because no one was available. So I’d track these dudes down, sometimes when they arrived on their travel day, and get to it. I actually got the majority of my rehearsal in, selfishly, without Bob even knowing.”

“For example, my stuff with Stanley could be six or seven pages,” LaBeouf explains, noting his onscreen run-ins with Stanley Tucci who plays his boss in the film, the editor-in-chief of a financially besieged local newspaper, The Albany Sun-Times. “It was all run and gun, so I’m happy that I had that rehearsal time with Stanley - that way, we could actually play the scenes.”

“That scene with Susan Sarandon is eight pages long,” LaBeouf continues, citing another sequence in which his character interviews Sarandon’s, Sharon Solarz, the woman whose arrest sets the story in motion. “Even with rehearsal that’s a heavy pressure,” says LaBeouf. “But that’s why you had pros around. It was really wild to be a part of all that.”

“It’s an amazing thing when you really trust your director because you let go and you feel really free,” says Marling. “You trust him to locate you in the story. You trust him to be your guide. And that’s a beautiful feeling because that’s the only way you can really be free enough to do your job... It was really a special thing to work on this movie.”

For Redford, the onscreen pyrotechnics in THE COMPANY YOU KEEP wouldn’t come from elaborate effects or CG-work, but instead the explosive interaction between his characters – a throwback, he agrees, to a different era in filmmaking.

“You have new technology now that’s driving a lot of films,” says Redford. “You have a lot of amazing stunts that are done to the point where you don’t even know what’s virtual and what's real. Some of that can be wildly entertaining – there may not be a lot of story there, but there's a lot of action and a lot of entertainment. That wasn't there in the 70s. It was much more of a storytelling time and that of course appeals to me. I think I still fall on the humanistic side of cinema.”

Redford continues, “When I was a kid I loved Frankenstein, I loved The Three Stooges, I loved musicals. I still love all of it. But when you become an artist, you do what's important to you. What's important to me are stories about American life. It's a great country, but let's look at the gray area of our country too. And that's what interests me because I've lived through it.”

ABOUT THE CAST

ROBERT REDFORD – Jim Grant (Director/Producer)

ROBERT REDFORD has won wide acclaim for his work as an actor, producer, director, champion of independent film and environmentalist. He won an Academy Award[®], a DGA Award, and a Golden Globe Award for best direction for his feature directing debut, the intensely emotional family drama Ordinary People. He was also nominated for an Academy Award[®] for directing Quiz Show.

As an actor, he earned an Academy Award[®] nomination for his performance in The Sting. In 2002, he received an honorary Academy Award[®] recognizing his achievements as an actor, director, producer, and the creator of Sundance Institute. Redford also directed and produced The Milagro Beanfield War, A River Runs Through It, The Horse Whisperer, The Legend of Bagger Vance, Lions for Lambs, and The Conspirator, and served as executive producer and narrator of Incident at Oglala, a documentary about the Native American activist Leonard Peltier.

Born in Santa Monica, California, Redford attended the University of Colorado but left school after two years to travel through Europe, studying art in Paris and Florence. He continued his art studies when he returned to the U.S. by enrolling at the Pratt Institute in Brooklyn. At the suggestion of an instructor, Redford moved to the American Academy of Dramatic Arts, where a passion for acting superseded his interest in pictorial art. A small part on Broadway led to roles in several major live television dramas, and, in 1961, he made his feature debut in War Hunt.

Later that year, he starred in his first Broadway show, Sunday in New York, which was soon followed by Barefoot in the Park. It was the film version of Barefoot in the Park that first brought him both public and industry notice. Redford went on to portray an array of characters in a spectrum of films, many from his own production company, Wildwood Enterprises.

Under the Wildwood banner, Redford starred in Downhill Racer and The Candidate, and he produced and starred in All the President's Men. Other film roles include Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid, Jeremiah Johnson, The Way We Were, The Three Days of the Condor, Brubaker, The Natural, Out of Africa, Indecent Proposal, Up Close and Personal, The Last Castle, Spy Game, The Clearing, and An Unfinished Life. Redford received the 1997 National Medal for the Arts from President Clinton. In December 2005, Redford accepted the Kennedy Center Honors for his “distinguished achievement in the performing arts and in recognition of his extraordinary contributions to the life of our country.”

SHIA LABEOUF – Ben Shepard

Shia LaBeouf has secured his place as one of the new generation of Hollywood leading men.

In addition to his participation in the all-star ensemble cast of Robert Redford's The Company You Keep (2013), Shia can be seen in the crime drama Lawless for director John Hillcoat. The film, set against the backdrop of Depression-era bootlegging, also stars Tom Hardy, Gary Oldman, Guy Pearce, Jessica Chastain and Mia Wasikowska, and debuted in Cannes to a standing ovation.

Following Lawless, Shia stars in The Company You Keep, directed by Robert Redford. The story centers on a former Weather Underground activist who goes on the run from a journalist who has discovered his identity. The film co-stars an award-winning ensemble cast that includes Robert Redford, Julie Christie, Stanley Tucci, Susan Sarandon and Chris Cooper.

Shia most recently wrapped production in Romania on The Necessary Death of Charlie Countryman opposite Evan Rachel Wood and Melissa Leo. The film focuses on Charlie and his romantic exploits with a girl who was previously claimed by a mob boss with a penchant for violence and a gang at his disposal.

In 2011, LaBeouf was seen in Transformers: Dark of the Moon, which marked his third and final turn as Sam Witwicky. Also in 2011, he starred opposite Michael Douglas in Wall Street: Money Never Sleeps, directed by Oliver Stone. In 2008, he starred in the fourth installment of Steven Spielberg's "Indiana Jones" series, Indiana Jones and the Kingdom of the Crystal Skull opposite Harrison Ford; teamed with director D.J. Caruso for a second time on the thriller Eagle Eye, co-starring Michelle Monaghan, Rosario Dawson and Michael Chiklis; and appeared with Julie Christie and John Hurt in the Anthony Minghella-scripted segment of New York I Love You, a romantic anthology.

Additional film credits include: Disturbia; the Oscar[®] nominated animated film Surf's Up; A Guide to Recognizing Your Saints; Bobby; The Greatest Game Ever Played; I, Robot; Constantine; Charlie's Angels: Full Throttle; and HBO's Project Greenlight feature The Battle of Shaker Heights, produced by Matt Damon and Ben Affleck. He made his feature film debut in the 2003 comedy Holes, based on the best-selling book by Louis Sachar.

In 2007 Shia was named the Star of Tomorrow by the ShoWest convention of the National Association of Theater Owners, and in February 2008, he was awarded the BAFTA Orange Rising Star Award, which was voted for by the British general public. In addition, he was nominated for four Teen Choice Awards for Transformers, winning the Breakout Male Award; the Teen Choice Award for Movie Actor in a Horror/Thriller for his performance in Disturbia, as well as a Scream Award. In 2004, he was nominated for the Young Artists Award for Leading Young Actor in a Feature Film and the Breakthrough Male Performance at the MTV Movie Awards for his performance in Holes.

On television, LaBeouf garnered much praise for his portrayal of Louis Stevens on the Disney Channel's original series Even Stevens. In 2003, he earned a Daytime Emmy award for Outstanding Performer in a Children's Series for his work on the highly rated family show.

LaBeouf currently resides in California.

JULIE CHRISTIE – Mimi Lurie

Born in Assam, India, Julie Christie attended school in England, but at sixteen moved to Paris to study art. Later she became a drama student in London, gained experience on stage, and appeared on television before making her screen debut in John Schlesinger's Billy Liar. Just two years later, she re-teamed with Schlesinger for Darling, which earned her an Academy Award[®] for Best Actress, and that same year she starred in David Lean's epic, Dr. Zhivago, as the beautiful, love-torn Lara.

In 1971, Christie garnered her second Academy Award[®] nomination for Best Actress for her role in Robert Altman's western McCabe & Mrs. Miller, a film which also was her first of three screen collaborations with Warren Beatty, the other two being Shampoo and Heaven Can Wait.

After slowing her output of films in the 1980s, Christie returned to mainstream movies with a string of more recent high-profile releases, including Kenneth Branagh's Hamlet, Afterglow (for which she received her third Academy Award[®] nomination), Troy, Harry Potter and the Prisoner of Azkaban, Finding Neverland, and Away From Her, for which she received her fourth Oscar[®] nomination for Best Actress.

Christie stars among an all-star ensemble cast in Robert Redford's The Company You Keep (2013) as Redford's former lover, an unrepentent former 1970s radical who has been living underground for thirty years.

SAM ELLIOTT – Mac McLeod

Prior to his participation in the all-star ensemble cast of Robert Redford's The Company You Keep (2013), Sam Elliott most recently provided the voice of Chupadogra in Twentieth Century Fox's family comedy Marmaduke and then starred in the Hallmark Hall of Fame movie November Christmas as Jess Sanford.

Additionally, he starred with Hugh Grant and Sarah Jessica Parker in Columbia Pictures' romantic comedy Did you Hear About the Morgans? as Clay Wheeler. Elliott also had a cameo role as Maynard Finch in the 2010 Academy Award[®] Best Picture Nominee, Up in the Air.

In the past, Elliott appeared as Lee Scoresby in New Line Cinema's fantasy adventure The Golden Compass directed by Chris Weitz and starring Nicole Kidman and Daniel Craig. He was seen as the Caretaker in the hit film Ghost Rider opposite Nicolas Cage, and costarred in Thank You for Smoking directed by Jason Reitman. He also provided the voice of the patriarch in the animated comedy Barnyard and starred opposite Joan Allen in Off the Map, which premiered at the 2003 Sundance Festival.

Elliott first gained acclaim with his performance in the title role of Lifeguard. Other feature film credits include The Hulk, We Were Soldiers, The Contender, The Hi-Lo Country, The Big Lebowski, Tombstone, Gettysburg, Rush, Prancer, Fatal Beauty and Mask.

On television, Elliott was nominated for an Emmy and a Golden Globe for his role in Buffalo Girls. Other television credits include Fail Safe; You Know My Name, which was a movie for TNT that won the first Golden Boot “Best of the West” Award; the miniseries Murder in Texas; Gone to Texas, The Sam Houston Story; The Yellow Rose and Fugitive Nights.

ABOUT THE FILMMAKERS

LEM DOBBS – Screenplay

Lem Dobbs, son of distinguished American artist R.B. Kitaj, was born in Oxford and raised in London, England. A year spent in Hollywood, where his father was visiting professor at the University of California (Los Angeles), fueled his lifelong passion for movies, and he was able to meet such filmmaking legends as John Ford, Billy Wilder, George Cukor, and Jean Renoir. As a child (“actor”), he appeared in The Boy Who Turned Yellow, the final film of the great Powell & Pressburger.

While a student at the American School in London, Dobbs worked part-time in the famed Cinema Bookshop, just down the street from the British Museum. He returned to LA at the age of 18 to write screenplays. One of them, Edward Ford, is considered among the finest unproduced scripts in Hollywood, and contributed to his early reputation. Another script, The Marvel of the Haunted Castle, led to a tenure at 20th Century Fox as the youngest writer ever put under long-term contract by a studio.

During this period, among other assignments, Dobbs did uncredited rewrites on location in Mexico for the influential hit movie Romancing the Stone. Dobb’s first produced screenplay (which in turn was rewritten to his distaste by others) was the psychological suspense drama Hider in the House, starring Gary Busey and Mimi Rogers.

Prior to his work adapting the screenplay for Robert Redford’s The Company You Keep from the novel by Neil Gordon, his other films include director Steven Soderbergh’s Kafka, filmed on location in Prague, starring Jeremy Irons and Sir Alec Guinness; John Badham’s The Hard Way, starring Michael J. Fox and James Woods; and the science fiction thriller, Dark City, directed by Alex Proyas, which was chosen by movie critic Roger Ebert as the best film of 1998, and also won science fiction’s prestigious Saturn Award as best film, as well as the Bram Stoker Award from the Horror Writers Association of America, and the Australian Film Critics Circle Award for best screenplay of the year.

A second collaboration with director Soderbergh resulted in the critically- acclaimed The Limey, starring Terence Stamp and Peter Fonda. Both The Limey and Dark City the year before were honored as official selections of the Cannes Film Festival. Dobbs next co-wrote the heist movie The Score, directed by Frank Oz, which teamed acting heavyweights Robert De Niro, Marlon Brando, and Edward Norton. A Dobbs/Soderbergh “trilogy” was completed with Haywire, starring Gina Carano, Channing Tatum, Michael Fassbender, Ewan McGregor, and Michael Douglas. As a film historian, Dobbs has contributed articles to such journals as the British Film Institute’s Sight & Sound and provided DVD commentaries for various films, in addition to his own, including Double Indemnity, Von Ryan’s Express, and The Sand Pebbles.

CLIFF MARTINEZ - Composer

Cliff Martinez, who was born in the Bronx, but raised in Ohio, moved to California in 1976 landing in the middle of the punk movement. After stints as the drummer for The Weirdos, Lydia Lunch and Foetus front-man Jim Thirlwell, and the final incarnation of Captain Beefheart and the Magic Band, Martinez joined the Red Hot Chili Peppers (playing on the band's first two albums) and later The Dickies. It was during his tenure with The Chili Peppers that Cliff began exploring the new technologies of that era, which would eventually guide him towards the film music world.

A tape Martinez had put together using these new technologies made its rounds, leading him to score an episode of Pee-wee's Playhouse. The same recording also ended up in Steven Soderbergh's hands and Martinez was hired to score the famed director's first theatrical release 1989's sex, lies, and videotape. Martinez's longstanding relationship with Soderbergh has continued through the years and they have worked together on ten theatrical releases including Kafka, The Limey, Traffic, Solaris and 2011's Contagion.

Perhaps it is because of his time in the punk scene that Martinez's approach to scoring is nontraditional. His scores tend towards being stark and sparse, utilizing a modern tonal palette to paint the backdrop for films that are often dark, psychological stories like Pump Up the Volume (1990), The Limey (2009) Wonderland (2003), Wicker Park (2004), and Drive (2011). Martinez has been nominated for a Grammy Award (Steven Soderbergh's Traffic), a Cesar Award (Xavier Giannoli's A L'origine), and a Broadcast Film Critics Award (Drive).

Still the drummer at heart, Martinez's use of audio manipulations, particularly for percussive sounds, has been evolving through the years and is evident by the hammered dulcimer of Kafka (1991), the gray-areas between sound design and score for Traffic (2000), the steel drums and textures of Solaris (2002), what Martinez called 'rhythmi-tizing pitched, ambient textures' of Narc (2002), and 'using percussion performances to trigger and shape the rhythmic and tonal characteristics of those ambient textures,' as he described his score for 2011's The Lincoln Lawyer.

Cliff Martinez was inducted into the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame in April 2012 with the Red Hot Chili Peppers. He recently served as a juror for the 2012 Sundance Film Festival and served on the International Feature nominating committee for 2011 Film Independent Spirit Awards. Martinez's upcoming films include Robert Redford's The Company You Keep, Nicholas Jarecki's Arbitrage, Harmony Korine's Spring Breakers (co-composed with Skrillex), and Nicolas Winding Refn's Only God Forgives.
