A WOMAN, A GUN AND A NOODLE SHOP

A film by Zhang Yimou

A tale of a wife, her gun and the noodle shop

A WOMAN, A GUN AND A NOODLE SHOP is a remake of the 1985 directorial debut of Joel and Ethan Coen, BLOOD SIMPLE. Transposing the Coen Brother’s celebrated mix of dark humor and riveting suspense to China, the film is helmed by Zhang Yimou (director of THE RED SORGHUM, TO LIVE, HERO, HOUSE OF FLYING DAGGERS and other masterpieces), one of the most eminent directors of the “Fifth Generation”. This black comedy thriller is an exposé of how intense desires can consume humanity, and the irony that life never submits to our calculations.

SHORT SYNOPSIS

Wang is a miserable yet cunning noodle shop owner in a desert town in China. Feeling neglected, Wang’s wife secretly goes out with Li, one of his employees. A timid man, Li reluctantly keeps the gun the landlady bought for ‘killing her husband later’. However, not a single move they make escapes the boss’s notice, and he decides to bribe patrol officer Zhang to kill the illicit couple. It looks like a perfect plan: the affair will come to a cruel but satisfying end… or so he thinks, but the equally wicked Zhang has an agenda of his own that will lead to even more violence…

LONG SYNOPSIS

In a small desert town near Jiayu Pass in China (the first pass at the west end of the Great Wall), Wang owns a noodle shop where he, his wife and his employees also live. Not exactly a loving boss, he spends every penny to his own advantage, owing his workers their wages for months.
Miserable from suffering with Wang’s dark temper and abuse, his wife has an affair with Li, who can spin round sheets of noodle dough nimbly but never shows the same confidence outside the kitchen. Every time Li drives her to buy rouge, the two have sex in the carriage. One day, to Li’s dismay, she purchases a gun from a Persian merchant, claiming that only Wang’s death can guarantee their happiness. Never a match for her biting wit and tongue, Li agrees to hide the weapon.

Meanwhile, waiter Zhao and patrol officer Zhang – both bribed by the cunning Wang – inform him of the gun and the affair respectively. After catching her wife red-handed and grappling with her during one of her rouge trips, Wang resorts to paying Zhang to kill the illicit lovers.

The day after, Zhang returns with a blood-stained piece of clothing and fiercely pierced woman’s underwear. In his client’s secret chamber, Zhang waits for his reward and, all of a sudden, shoots Wang with Li’s gun he found earlier. As Wang lies completely motionless, Zhang struggles to open the safe but fails. Outside, Zhao and waitress Chen are arguing about whether they should sneak in and ‘steal’ their wages from the safe. As the door squeaks and a ray of light seeps through the crack, Zhang loses his nerve and escapes through the window, leaving the gun behind… Will someone discover Wang’s body? What will be done with his money? Who will lay hands on the gun? Nobody can say for sure because everyone is either silently plotting or plotted against…
DIRECTOR’S STATEMENT

I love all the works by the Coen Brothers. Some twenty years ago at a film festival, I saw their directorial debut BLOOD SIMPLE, which left me with a great impression. The film keeps coming back to my mind, although I haven’t seen it for a second time.

One day, a curious idea struck me: what would it be like if Blood Simple was made as a Chinese story? That was how A WOMAN, A GUN AND A NOODLE SHOP began to take shape.

I gave the remake a rich Chinese flavor, casting Xiao Shenyang – a young comic actor who recently shot to fame in China – to add in a sense of farcical humor at the beginning. The fun soon turns into riveting suspense. I also adopted the aesthetic style of the old Chinese opera piece, San Cha Kou. The result is the confinement of all the characters within the same space, each of them shifting roles with one another and making similar mistakes. This lays bare the absurdity of life – something ironically repetitive, always beyond our control.

I would like to thank all of the actors for their wonderful performances. I truly appreciate the effort and commitment of every member of the crew.

- Zhang Yimou
THE CAST

SUN Hunglei (as Zhang)

A 1997 graduate of The Central Academy of Drama, Sun Hunglei is an acclaimed character actor both on the stage and screen. Having started his film career in Zhang Yimou’s THE ROAD HOME in 1999, he won the 2000 Plum Blossom Award – a prestigious accolade in Chinese theater – with his performance in THE THREEPENNY OPERA. With a confident ease of identifying with the characters he portrays, Sun has attracted comparisons to veteran actor Jiang Wen (WARRIORS OF HEAVEN AND EARTH). Since the new millennium, he has been featured in a great number of popular productions, including Tsui Hark’s SEVEN SWORDS (2004), Alexi Tan’s BLOOD BROTHERS (2006) and Chen Kaige’s FOREVER ENTHRALLED (2007). Sun is also a beloved television personality, starring in celebrated drama series such the thrilling spy story Lurk (2008). He is a two-time winner of the Shanghai Television Festival Magnolia Award.

XIAO Shenyang (as Li)

Born in Liaoning Province, Xiao Shenyang developed his singing and other musical talents in performing groups during his teenage years. A student of renowned comedian Zhao Benshan (Getting Home), he rose to fame with his charismatic mimicry of pop singers at China Central Television’s 2008 Spring Festival Gala. He kicked off his acting career in the entertainment industry with TV series Love in a Village 2, later appearing in another series, Guangdong Da Xiansheng. This year, he returned to CCTV’s Gala and participated in its short comedy, Got the Money Anyway. A WOMAN, A GUN AND A NOODLE SHOP is his first film.

YAN Ni (as Wang’s wife)

An actress at the Television Art Center of the People’s Liberation Army Air Force, Yan Ni garnered wide recognition with her role as an endearing tavern owner in the period drama series My Own Swordsman (2005), which won the 26th Flying Apsaras Award for Top Drama. The Chinese screen industry saw her popularity soar further when she received the Plum Blossom Award for Best Actress with The North Wind in 2009. Yan has also been casted in numerous films, notably the Hua Biao Award winning, New Year-comedy BIE NA ZI JI BU DANG GAN BU (2007) and the starry coproduction KUNG FU DUNK (2008).

CHENG Ye (as Zhao)

Cheng Ye has been devoted to folk performing arts since childhood. An avid entertainer, he is one of the most skilled students of Zhao Benshan. He has mesmerized a vast audience with his vivacious appearance in Guo Nian Le at Liaoning Television’s 2008 Spring Festival Gala, as well as TV series Guangdong Da Xiansheng.
MAO Mao (as Chen)

Mao Mao has performed in various TV shows such as China Central Television’s 2009 Spring Festival Gala. She played “Ya Dan Er” in the Gala’s comic piece, Got the Money Anyway.

THE FILMMAKERS

ZHANG Yimou (Director)

Ever since his directorial debut, RED SORGHUM (1987), which won the Golden Bear Award at the Berlin Film Festival, Zhang Yimou has established his reputation as one of the most talented and influential directors today.

Zhang Yimou was born in China in 1950 and studied cinematography at the Beijing Film Academy. He became a leading member of China’s Fifth Generation Filmmakers, the first group to graduate following the turbulent Cultural Revolution. He is an accomplished actor, starring in Red Sorghum as well as earning the Best Actor Award at the Tokyo International Film Festival for his performance in OLD WELL (1986). Zhang Yimou is also a skilled cinematographer, with credits including YELLOW EARTH (1984), OLD WELL (1986), and THE BIG PARADE (1986).

Zhang Yimou has received multiple honors as a director. He is the first Chinese filmmaker to receive Motion Picture Academy recognition, being nominated for Academy Awards® in the Best Foreign Film category for JU DOU in 1990, RAISE THE RED LANTERN in 1991, and HERO in 2003. He has earned numerous top honors, including the Silver Lion at the 44th Venice International Film Festival for RAISE THE RED LANTERN (1991), the Golden Lion Award at the 45th Venice International Film Festival for THE STORY OF QIU JU (1992), the Grand Jury Prize at the 47th Cannes International Film Festival for TO LIVE (1994), the Golden Lion Award at the 52nd Venice International Film Festival for NOT ONE LESS (1999), the Silver Bear at the Berlin International Film Festival for THE ROAD HOME (1999) and the Alfred Bauer Prize for HERO (2003).

HERO went on to sweep the board at the 22nd Hong Kong Film Awards, winning awards for Best Action Choreography, Best Art Direction, Best Cinematography, Best Costume Design, Best Music, Best Sound and Best Visual Effects.

Zhang Yimou’s box office hit HOUSE OF FLYING DAGGERS received multiple international awards as well as BAFTA and Golden Globe nominations for Best Foreign Film. He followed up with 2005’s RIDING ALONE FOR THOUSANDS OF MILES and 2006’s CURSE OF THE GOLDEN FLOWER.

Zhang Yimou has mastered new realms of creativity in recent years. On the stage of New York’s Metropolitan Opera in December 2006, he directed Placido Domingo in the world premiere of composer Tan Dun’s original opera The First Emperor. He also acted as the chief director of the spectacular opening and closing ceremonies of the 29th Olympic Games in Beijing, 2008.

ZHOU Xiaofeng (Story Consultant)

A Beijing-born graduate of the Chinese Department of Shangdong University, Zhou worked as an editor of children’s literature for 8 years. In 2000, she joined the Beijing Publishing House as a magazine editor. She is also the author of several award-winning prose works.
ZHAO Xiaoding (Director of Photography)

Zhao Xiaoding graduated from the prestigious Beijing Film Academy in 1987 with a degree in Cinematography. Zhao shot his first feature film, SOUL OF THE THUNDERING MOUNTAIN (1987) straight out of college and has since been extremely prolific, averaging at least one film a year. His other works include the critically acclaimed A SEASON OF FLOWERS AND RAIN (1999) and SPRING SUBWAY (2001).

In 2001, Zhao Xiaoding began his collaboration with Director Zhang Yimou, working as the cameraman on Zhang’s martial arts epic, HERO (2003). The two struck up a great working relationship, and when Zhang Yimou began preparations for HOUSE OF FLYING DAGGERS, the helmer quickly asked Zhao to be Director of Photography on his new film. Zhao’s work on the film earned him his first Academy Award nomination for Best Cinematography.

Aside from his cinematic commitments, Zhao Xiaoding is a refined and experienced television commercial cinematographer. Zhao has shot advertising campaigns for some of the leading brands in the world including Coca Cola, Armani Perfume, Toyota and the Bank of China.

Zhao Xiaoding was Director of Photography on the successful publicity film for Beijing’s Olympic bid, the Shanghai Expo bid and the Beijing 2008 Logo Unveiling publicity film.
